Manager submits $21m budget

An estimated $17 million increase in valuation will allow a budget increase of 6.58 percent for the town of Wilmington in the coming fiscal year. Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski presented his budget message to the selectman Monday night, with a total budget of $21,289,836.

The budget for FY-1984 was $19,974,980.

The levy limit, the total which may be assessed in taxes, is $13,479,385. Stapczynski's budget calls for a tax levy of $13,479,044, $341 short of the limit. The tax levy represents a 2.5 percent increase, plus $405,540 in taxes from the new construction.

Stapczynski stressed two themes in his budget message: a revenue-based budget, and infrastructure preservation. The revenue based budget is more or less required by Prop.

2 1/2, in that there is a limit on property tax increases. By infrastructure preservation, the town manager is referring to maintenance of the town's physical assets - roads, buildings, equipment and facilities - to maximize use benefits while minimizing future repair costs.

Among the significant increases in the budget are: solid waste pickup $84,950, retirement $72,118, health and life insurance $79,200, and workers' compensation $50,000. Other items are a new septic system at the Shawsheen School $80,000, roof repairs to the Wildwood School $25,000, air conditioning for the new town hall (Glen Road School) $24,000, new carpet at the library $17,000, replacing clapboards at the Harnden Tavern $15,000, demolition of the Walker and Whitefield Schools $15,000, and new garage doors at the fire station $13,500.

A total of $344,500 is requested in warrant articles for replacement of various items of equipment and facilities. This includes $129,500 for public works vehicles, trucks, a sander body and a lawnmower, $44,000 for police cruisers, $100,000 for a computer for the town accountant, $43,000 for Fire Department vehicles, $20,000 for a new van for the Council on Aging and $8,000 for a vehicle in the Public Buildings Dept.

The Fire Dept. figure includes $8,000 for a new pickup truck and $35,000 for the lease-purchase of a new pumper, which would cost $140,000 outright.

Legal action possible in Marion Street case

Legal action may be pending in the Marion Street case.

Dan Gillis left the possibility open, in a discussion of the right of way with the Wilmington Planning Board Tuesday night. He appeared before the board along with Maryanne Delaney, Harriet Lombard and Richard Cole. Maryanne Delaney seeks to build a home near the Chestnut Street end of Marion Street, and has a 50-foot right of way, except at the Chestnut Street entrance.

There is 20 feet, possibly less, between land owned by the Emery family and the land owned by the Rumford Historical Society of Woburn, where stands the Baldwin Apple Monument. The Emerys also have horse corrals along the old street, which may or may not be in the area of the proposed right of way.

Gillis and Delaney said that the Emery family wants to know more about the end of the road. They do have ownership rights. Gillis added that he has not had time to check the situation out with the Rumford Historical Society.

That entrance seems to be the hub of the problem. Planning Board Chairman Bill Hooper said it was a case of "first things first," meaning the entrance problem would have to be solved first.

Gillis reminded Hooper of the 491 to 7 vote in the October special town meeting, "so that a building permit may be issued without Board of Appeals action on the street."

"You discontinued the street, when you made the official map," Gillis said.

Hooper reminded Gillis of Section 1.3.12 of the zoning by-law, which defines the access to a street. He was, he said, going to take the case under advisement, which the law allows the board to do for 14 days.

Gillis assured Hooper there was a 20-foot access at Chestnut Street, but Hooper repeated that he was taking the case under advisement.

The Emery family "are reluctant to release," Gillis said. "Her attorney is well aware that he can go for damages, since the town meeting vote."

Gillis also warned that he would probably take action at the annual town meeting.

Seek to extend Woburn Street sewer

A proposal to extend the Woburn Street sewer northerly was made last Thursday, at the meeting of the Wilmington Water and Sewer Commissioners.

The proposed sewer would relate to a new building for Avco, as well as proposed housing for the elderly on land next to Lucci's Shopping Center.

The sewer was proposed by John Lucci, who met with the commissioners for more than an hour, along with housing authority member Dan Gillis and Charles Johnson of Avco.

The Woburn Street sewer presently ends at Brentwood Avenue. It is a 16-inch force main, until it passes the hill north of Industrial Way. The sewer was built in the 1950's to serve the Avco complex, and includes a pumping station on Avco property.

The proposal by Lucci would mean a larger sewer, the commissioners said. They would not be satisfied with a 16-inch main, for once the sewer crosses Woburn Street, it must be of a size sufficient to service all of North Wilmington easterly of Route 93.

The proposal was made because Avco needs more space, and wants Lucci to more than double the amount of space he now leases to the firm, on the northerly side of Lowell Street. Avco wants to start construction on March 1, Lucci said.

Dan Gillis brought another problem into the discussion. When the housing authority was seeking proposals for housing four years ago, the first choice was the now-defeated project near Wilmington Plaza. Second choice was a proposal on land owned by Lucci, between Lucci's stores and Woodland Road.

Gillis said he believed money would soon be available for more housing for the elderly and handicapped.

This proposal, Lucci said, "has nothing to do with me except that I own the land." The entrance to the housing would be off Woodland Road, and the housing would extend back toward Argonne Road.

There would be six buildings for housing, with eight apartments downstairs and six upstairs. Included would be two apartments for handicapped persons. There would be a path to the stores at Lucci's Shopping Center.

As proposed, the sewer would include a pumping station on Lucci's property north of Lowell Street. A gravity sewer would run from the existing stores, and from the proposed housing, north to the pumping station. Also, the pumping station would serve the Avco addition and the building Lucci is proposing for the lot on the northeast corner of the intersection, known as the Swain lot. The pumping station would then feed a force main, southerly across Lowell Street, along Woburn Street.

Financing was discussed, with the state said to be providing 40 percent, and 60 percent from other sources. The town's share would be zero.

Chairman George Allan said he was willing to discuss the ideas, providing that they led to an extension of the sewer system northward on Woburn Street. He talked of having an engineer study the proposal, and instructing him to talk with Avco.

Proposed sewer extension

A proposed extension of the Woburn Street sewer would serve the existing stores at Lucci's, as well as new buildings, including a building for Avco, a professional building and housing for the elderly. At lower right is where housing for elderly persons could be built, on land now owned by John Lucci.

CLOCK
Tock

by
THE CLOCKFOLK OF NEW ENGLAND
Wilmington

A CLOCK'S PENDULUM regulates the timekeeping of that clock. This is why some pendulums are short and others long. The gearing of a clock mechanism is designed to have a certain length pendulum to keep time. A short pendulum will swing quickly and a long pendulum will swing slowly. However, both pendulums are of the proper length to keep correct time with the clocks for which they were designed.

In the mid 17th Century, of the several applications, which were attempted fitting a pendulum to a clock mechanism, that by the Dutch scientist, Christiaan Huygens was the most successful. The pendulum, basically as we know it today, was invented in 1657 and proved that a pendulum clock could be a reliable source of timekeeping. Revisions and improvements on the pendulum, in an attempt to make it a more accurate device, continued for nearly the next 300 years. Developments limiting the extremely slight lengthening or shortening of the pendulum in a warm or cold environment, were adapted to pendulums for higher accuracy and about 1760 a different method of transferring the power from the clock mechanism to the pendulum was invented in Britain, which rendered the pendulum more independent of the mechanism and henceforth unaffected by thickening oils or inevitable wear in the clock.

The pendulum clock reached its height of sophistication about the 1930's, with incorporated developments from electrical impulses to non-expandable alloys.

Prayer to the Holy Spirit

Oh Holy Spirit, Thou who are all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, Thou who giveth me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done unto me, and who in every instant of my life art with me. I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and re-affirm once again that I never want to part from Thee though the illusion of material things abound.

My desire is to be with Thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank You for Your mercy on me and mine, (person should pray three consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days, grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be). Publish this prayer once grace attained. Grateful for grace attained.

Variance granted for house lot in Tewksbury

The Tewksbury Board of Appeals granted Monday night a variance for a house lot on Valley Road. The variance from the town's zoning bylaw will allow construction of a single family home on the lot of about 5000 square feet.

The lot has about 50 feet of frontage and is near the Wilmington line. A two story Garrison type home is being planned.

George and Phyllis Brothers were the appellants. The house lot is owned by Walter Rocco, and he owns no immediate property in the area, the appeals board was told. Atty. Kevin Sullivan told the appeals board that there are about 50 homes in the area located on lots with 50 feet of frontage.

Joyce and Thomas Billcliff of 25 County Road own abutting property and told the appeals board that they had no objection to building on the lot, but were worried about the septic system. Mrs. Billcliff told the board that they had a swimming pool, but it disappeared. They were told that the septic system was a problem to discuss with the health board.

The approval granted by the board of appeals contains stipulations from the Tewksbury Planning Board on how to construct Valley Road, currently a dirt road, to the lot where the house is to be located

Early families in Wilmington

The Woburn records show that 43 taxpayers lived in Goshen at the time that Wilmington became a town. This number probably included the Jaquith family, and possibly others who lived in that part of Billerica which became a part of Wilmington in 1737.

As a guess there may have been five or six families in the Land of Nod. As another guess there may have been a dozen in that part of Reading which became a part of Wilmington. The total number of families is thus about 60.

Sixteen men (not including the Rev. James Varney) joined the church when it was formed. That leaves about 42 families who were not members.

No record was kept as to the number of men who attended a town meeting, but there are records of persons being elected to office. Up through the March 1732 town meeting there were 11 men elected to office who were not in the list of church members. Some undoubtedly became church members later.

Daniel Pierce, Samuel Walker and Lt. Benjamin Harnden were not among the early joiners. But all three men were appointed, as a part of a five man committee, to build the first church, and this in December 1730. Mr. Pierce was elected the moderator of the 1732 annual meeting.

Some of the titles of elected officials are, in today's thinking "quaint." Why should a town elect hog reeves? Why should there be a number of persons who were "Surveyors of highway."

Then there were Fence Viewers and Tything Men. A few years later there were men to inspect the circumstances when a deer was killed, and still later an Inspector of Flax.

Hog Reeves were men who made certain that the neighbors' pigs were properly fenced in.

But year after year the town voted that "Swine are to go free this year."

Inspectors of Highways were persons who were to make certain that roads were kept clear of brush, up to a width distance of 32 feet. The abutting landowners were responsible. There is no ready clue as to how the law was enforced. There probably was some kind of penalty.

Members of the church on Oct. 24, 1733 were Isaac Buck, Ephraim Buck Jr., John Cram, Daniel Eames, Cadwallader Ford, John Harnden, Zacheus Hebbard, John How, Abraham Jaquith, Joseph Killam, Samuel Leman, Kendal Pearson, Thomas Rich Jr., James Townsend, James Tompson, Stephen Wesson and Stephen Wright.

Residents who were elected to some public office and who it seems were not members of the church as of October 1733 include Samuel Buck, Samuel Butter, William Butter (first board of selectmen), Ebenezer Carter, William Dummer, Daniel Going (Gowing), Barachius Harnden, Benjamin Harnden, Benjamin Harnden Jr., Joseph Lewes, Thomas Parker, Daniel Pierce, Ebenezer Pierce, Giles Robert, Nathaniel Townsend and Benjamin Walker.

In March 1734 the names of Joel Jenkins, Ebenezer Jones and Jonathan Jones appear.

Names which probably should show include the Beard family, the Boutwell family, the family of Peter Corneille, the Evans family, the Tidd and the Tweed families, and Joshua Tompson, who was one year older than his brother James and lived somewhere in Wilmington.

There were, it seems about 17 families living in Wilmington in March 1734, whose names are not known today.

The Andover Road (c 1637). The original road between Boston and Andover, and then on to Haverhill and to Maine.

The Charlestown Line (c 1636). The original division line between Charlestown and Lynn. Reading was made of a part of Lynn, and Woburn was a part of Charlestown.

The Shawshen Line (c 1665). The agreed upon division line between Woburn and Billerica. It was laid out to be one mile east of the Shawshen River.

Tewksbury was set off from Billerica in 1734. The Shawshen line went as far as the Andover boundary.

Wilmington in 1745

Wilmington, at about the time of King George's War. The shaded area in the north was the Land of Nod, which was a part of the town when it was formed in 1730. The shaded area in the west (left) is the land acquired from Billerica, the Abraham Jaquith farm in 1731, and six other farms in 1737.

What's in a name?

Tewksbury and Wilmington

Tewksbury and Wilmington were named after towns of cities in Great Britain. Right?

Wrong!

They were so named because the Royal Governor (and others) of Massachusetts Bay Colony were very much aware that George I, King of England, would soon be replaced by the Prince of Wales, who would then become George II. Those Boston politicians wanted to be on the right side when the new king assumed his throne.

The Earl of Wilmington was a sort of important person, in the entourage of that Prince of Wales. He was an attractive person, but one without too much ability. He was a friend of the man who would become king, in the near future.

That was how Wilmington got its name. No one was asked, of the local population. The Royal Colonial Government thought Wilmington was a good name, and that was that.

The same thing happened about that time in the colonies of North Carolina and Delaware.

And, among the titles of the Prince of Wales was that of Duke of Tewksbury. Tewksbury is a city in Worcestershire, in the western part of England. A small, but somewhat important battle occurred there during the Wars of the Roses.

When the Prince of Wales was traveling incognito he sometimes used the title Duke of Tewksbury.

And, for the very same reason that Wilmington became Wilmington in 1730, the new town of Tewksbury became Tewksbury in 1734. Nothing was more important to the colonial government than to be in the good graces of George II when he became king.

letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

Election Day in April approaches quickly, and already two incumbent Wilmington selectmen have made known their intentions to seek another term in office; James Stewart and Rocco DePasquale. Unfortunately, no one has yet to announce any opposition. Hopefully this will change very shortly, and with good reason.

In a government where we have the right to make a choice as to who our leaders are and what they stand for, it is essential that more than one name appear on the ballot for a given position. Secondly, we must ask ourselves whether the community has improved or deteriorated under the leadership of the two incumbents who are up for re-election in April.

Basically, the forthcoming town election day is a chance for the voters to review the past performance of those who seek another term in office. In this voter's opinion, the past performance of both Mr. Stewart and Mr. DePasquale merit careful review, and that the necessary changes should be made when we go to the polls in April. For this to happen, Wilmington needs some honest and responsible men and women to seek election to the Board of Selectmen.

In order to decide whether we desire a change in our town government, we should all ask ourselves a few questions in regard to important issues that face us. First of all, if your finding it easy to get down route 38 at 8:00 on a weekday morning, then no doubt you feel that the two selectmen up for reelection are experts in town planning and gradual industrial growth. But if your experiencing otherwise, you might desire an opportunity for a change in April. In reference to rezoning, housing for the elderly, and a high school renovation plan that voters can live with, both Selectman Stewart and Selectman DePasquale have similarly poor track records. And, there is also the issue of patronage on the part of some selectmen which has become more and more apparent lately.

Hopefully, the next few weeks will offer many candidates for the two selectmen seats. In any election, the

Dear Larz:

It was a sad day for Tewksbury in December when duly elected public officials completely disregarded the spoken will of the people. Less than five years ago, the Tewksbury Board of Health held an open meeting to discuss fluoridation of the public water supply. This meeting was well publicized, and there was a large turnout.

After the speakers on both sides of the issue had finished, Tewksbury residents took the microphone one after another and clearly expressed their desire NOT to have fluoride put in the water supply. There were many different reasons given; such as, freedom of choice to decide what one takes into his body; the cost factor of putting fluoride into the entire system when only one percent is used for drinking water; the possibility that fluoridation is not safe in view of conflicting opinions of doctors and dentists; the fact that some people will be allergic to fluoride. One young mother was almost in tears as she stated her baby was highly allergic to fluoridated water and could not even be bathed in it. Other parents held up bottles of fluoride pills which they chose to give their children under doctor's directions, but they firmly stated they did not want the Board of Health deciding for them. The only Tewksbury resident in favor was a man who works for a government agency which promotes fluoridation.

The message of the townspeople was loud and clear to the board of health, but it seems not to matter. Now, the Tewksbury Board of Health, which consists of just three people, has decided that every man, woman and child in Tewksbury must drink fluoride. It is now up to the people of Tewksbury to gather signatures on a petition requesting the question be placed on the ballot so that the voters can decide for themselves. Help would be appreciated. It is time to remind the Tewksbury Board of Health that our government is OF the people, BY the people and FOR the people.

Sincerely yours,
Ruth Arsenault

TMHS winter track

Murphy, Luken key Tewksbury

The Tewksbury Redmen boys and girls (first season) indoor track teams are at the mid-season break of MVC action. The boys' team at this point stands at 0-4 in Division I. The girls' team record stands at 1-4 in the nine team girls' MVC Division, the lone win coming at the expense of Haverhill.

On the boys' side of the ledger, one would think there are only debts. Not so in the eyes of coach Dennis McGadden. "Junior Steven Murphy has just been outstanding all season. He has been first or second in the mile or two mile events and has just been running great," offered the TMHS coach.

Also looking good for the boys have been Richard Lapham a sophomore, juniors Dave Flanagan, Wayne Freitag and Keith Norton, along with captain Karl Kresien. Senior standouts have been Kent Appleby, Paul Laurin, Tim O'Keefe, Joe Hannon, Renito Luis and captain Doug Davidson. Good looking freshmen and future Redmen standouts are Ken Covello, Tim McCaffery, Scott Karlberg, Jim Marsh, Eric Hanson, Brian Tremblay and Peter Riddle. "We had the biggest turnout of runners this season ever, and fewer dropouts than in the past. This is also a plus for the program," noted assistant coach Bill Piscione.

As for the girls, in their first season, the attitude, effort and individual pride in their team has been just super. There is no question that Tewksbury has a superstar in Beverly Luken. To date all she has done is take home first place at the Boston College Winter Classic Invitational, that victory coming in the 55 meter dash with a time of 7.25. This meet included runners from New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Bev took first place in the 50 yard dash at the Methuen Invitational, besting many of the finest sprinters from this area and Cape Cod.

January 21, Luken topped the field in the 50 yard dash at the prestigious Mass. State Coaches Meet held at Harvard University, the first Tewksbury girl to ever do so.

In MVC dual meet action she is undefeated in the 50 yard dash and in the 300 yard dash. She also holds (tied) the record in the 50 yard dash in the MVC.

"Bev is a once in a lifetime dream come true for any coach. She's a fine student, a team player, and will do whatever you ask of her. I wish I could take credit for all her talents, but when out there in the events, she does it on her own. She is a pure athlete as well as a first class lady," praised McGadden.

Beverly is not the team's lone asset however. Kathy Weissensee has been just great in the 100 yard run and in the high jump (4'8"). Teresa Forsyth has done a fine job in the mile and two mile runs and Christine Silk has been super in the 600 yard dash and relay (along with Forsyth, Weissensee and Luken).

Vicki Westover has four first places and a second place finish in the shot put in her very first season. Also in the shot put, Pia Romano and Heather Coyle have been doing fine work. Late comer Julie Bernardi has improved in each meet in the mile run. Seniors Amy Cole (300) and Nadine Black (50) have improved. Junior Tracy Meehan is coming around in the hurdles, and should be great next season. Freshman standout Sue McLaughlin (300) will be a good one in the near future.

Others improving with each meet are Andrea Lombardi (50), Jennifer Rogers (hurdles), Debbie Brewer (50), Amy DiGiorgio (hurdles), Kathy Frotten (300), Peggy Forsyth (mile-two mile) and Debbie Holden in the hurdles. Dee Silva (hurdles) has also shown some potential for Tewksbury.

Both the boys and girls are back in action Thursday (Jan 26, 6:30) at the Lowell Field House with a meet against Lawrence.

The season concludes for both teams when they compete in the Northern Area Meet at Beverly High School February 18 (1 p.m.) and the MVC League Meet February 21 (10 a.m.) at the Methuen Field House.

Redmen rebound with double victory

The TMHS wrestling squad bounced back from set-backs to Methuen (40-18) and Chelmsford (42-14) to post an impressive tri-meet victory over Dracut (40-15) and Greater Lawrence Regional (51-15) last week.

The wins improved coach Al Donovan's team to 7-3 overall and 3-3 in the conference.

Wildcats steamroll Lowell, 6-0

Wilmington High School's unbeaten (5-0-1) hockey squad kept right on plowing through the MVHL schedule last week enroute to upcoming 'class' encounters with Billerica, Chelmsford and Tewksbury that could go a long way in determining the Wildcats' tournament fate.

Last week Wilmington pounded Lowell, 6-0, as junior goalie Bill Wolfe scored his second shutout of the season. It was the Wildcats' second consecutive shutout and the team's third this season, the others coming against Lawrence and Andover.

Senior tri-captain Dennis Moran (14 goals, 10 assists) continued to trigger the Cats' attack, scoring the hat trick. Brian Tully, senior tri-captain Dean Athanasia and junior defenseman Dave Fuller also lit the lamp for the locals.

WHS winter track

Young talent sparks Wildcats

Wilmington High School's indoor track squads may be struggling so far this winter with three wins in 10 decisions, but ever-bubbling-over head coach Frank Kelley sees enthusiasm and plenty of talent ahead for his young boys' and girls' squads.

The girls have won three meets thus far, including defeating Methuen and Haverhill for the first time ever. The boys are 0-4 going into Thursday night's (Jan. 26) meet with Greater Lawrence at the Lowell High Field House. Kelley sees a win for both the boys and girls Thursday that he thinks will lead to many better days down the road.

"We've lost both of the last two meets by 15 points to Greater Lowell and 26 points to Lowell," offers Kelley. "But I could walk off after each of those meets and say that there wasn't a person on the team who didn't give as much as he or she possibly could."

The WHS girls not only defeated Methuen and Haverhill, but took Billerica, a team that they have never beaten indoors or outdoors, right down to the final relay event.

A number of Wilmington girls have been pleasant surprises, according to their coach. They include sophomore two miler Andrea Hayden who ran an 11:49.6 Saturday at the State Coaches Meet to finish better than 13th overall. Also starring in the distance events for the Cats are senior Lisa Desforge, along with juniors Lauren Callahan and Debbi Errico. That Hayden-Desforge-Callahan-Errico quartet makes up one of the better relay outfits in the conference.

Also contributing to the distance events are freshmen Kristen Galvin, Michelle Holbrook and Ann Marie Meeker.

"We've been improving in just about every event," notes Kelley of his young 3-3 team. Helping that upswing along have been junior shot putter Kim Mytych (out for the team for the first time) and junior 300 runner and high jumper Nancy Jones. Nancy recently cleared 4'10 in the high jump to tie the school record. Juniors Julie Richburg, Pam Davis and Lisa Medeiros are also competing in the hurdles for Wilmington.

Senior captain Stephanie Briggs has provided leadership along with some solid performances in the hurdles and the shot put. Diane Tobey is a senior distance runner who "runs anything that we need," according to Kelley.

The young athletes gearing up for the future dot this team however. Sophomore Kim Dinsmore and junior Beth Boulton both run the 600 and are improving each week. Sophomore Cheryl Bishop (50 yard dash) is another young lady gearing up for a bright WHS track future.

The WHS boys' indoor squad, despite an 0-4 slate, is not short on young talent. Sophomore Frank Dinsmore ran the 1000 in 2:26.9 at the recent State Coaches Meet. Dinsmore has been the Wildcats' most consistent runner, placing first or second in almost every meet.

Sophomore Eric Cripianuk competes in the 300 and the high jump, and is gearing up for the spring season where his jump really takes off. Another sophomore, John Desforge, has been a strong competitor in the 300 and the 600.

The sophomores really dominate the mile and the two mile. Brian Ribeiro, David Trout, James Penny, All Prescott and Mark Eddy all have a fine distance future. "Last year the two mile was our weakest event," notes Kelley. Now the Wildcats are picking up much needed points when it comes down to the distance events.

"These young kids are all improving, and we can see something for the future," says the WHS coach. "They've all broken nine minutes, which is decent for a young team."

This squad is not without its' contributing veterans however. Senior Paul Caizzi, although running winter track for the first time, has done well in the 50 yard dash. Senior Sean O'Beirne is the team's number one hurdler who keeps improving with each meet. Senior Bill Odum (600, 1000), junior Todd Lewis (600) and junior Glenn Baptiste (distance) have all contributed for the Cats.

They 'old man' of the team according to Kelley is senior Darin Mather, a veteran of four WHS track years who competes in the 1000, mile and two mile.

WHS hoopsters take two

The Wildcat freshman boys basketball team, using zone and man-to-man defensive pressure, defeated Tewksbury, 46-41 in recent action at the WHS gym. The score doesn't tell the whole story, as the Wildcats took a 2-0 lead and never looked back.

The frosh led 11-9, 26-19 and 34-30 at the quarter breaks. Playing his starting five only two quarters, Coach Bill Simmons emptied the bench as 12 different players scored points.

George Fuller led this balanced team effort with nine points. Jim Moynihan pumped in eight, while Jim Pelletier and Mike Desmond chipped in with six apiece. Rob DeSantis added four points, as did Bob Boudreau. Al Ausiello, Scott Ferrari, Eric Braciska and Rob LaBossierie each hooped two points. Danny O'Connell rounded out the scoring with a free throw.

Wilmington 38 Dracut 28

Benjamin Thompson

Tory, informer, scientist--Count

By JOHN A.S. PHILLIPS

How does informer and tory sympathizer become a public benefactor and scientist of world renown?

How could the idea of founding the Royal Institution in London originate in the mind of a man whom some historians claim baked bread in an American graveyard oven made of discarded tombstones so that the local inhabitants saw "loaves of bread drawn out of these ovens with the reversed inscription of the tombstones of their friends on the lower crust"?

One could ask other embarrassing questions of the American Loyalist Benjamin Thompson, a Woburn native, who inspired expressions of love and hatred. Once when dangerously ill, he was heartened to hear that hundreds of Munich's poor attended the cathedral to pray for his recovery.

Towards the end of his life, his wife, Anne Lavoisier, whom he once called a "female dragon", poured boiling water over his favorite flowers because he had just locked her dinner guests out of the house in a fit of pique. His life was often on the boil, a crude analogy to his lifelong interest in light and heat and their efficient use of mankind. The interest went back to his childhood days in Woburn, Massachusetts where he nearly blew himself up while arranging a fireworks display to celebrate the repeal of the hated Stamp Act.

He was born on March 26, 1753 in Woburn not many miles away from the birthplace of the celebrated statesman and scientist Benjamin Franklin. Hitherto young Benjamin Thompson's life (he was created Count Rumford in 1792) had been uneventful, save for the early death of his father — a farmer — and his mother's subsequent remarriage. Noteworthy was his early interest in science.

After attending grammar school and trying various jobs, he began studying medicine, including attending lectures on science at Harvard College. He partly financed his studies by teaching; he was so successful that he was invited to teach at Concord, New Hampshire, where he met his future wife, Sarah Rolfe, a wealthy army officer's widow in her thirties and the daughter of a prominent clergyman, the Reverend Timothy Walker. Commenting on the marriage in later years, Rumford said: "She married me, not I her." However, at the time, he was grateful. They were married in November 1772. He gave up teaching and entered the colonial army accepting a commission as major in the Second New Hampshire Regiment from the Provincial Governor, John Wentworth. Barely 19 years of age, Thompson seemed assured of a brilliant career, however, civil war intervened with the initial skirmish with the British at Lexington, on April 19, 1775.

General Gage, Commander of the British forces in nearby Boston, needed information about rebel troop movements, which Thompson provided. Citizens of Concord and Woburn suspected him of being an informer but could not prove it when they summoned him to appear before a Committee of Correspondence in the summer of 1774 and in May of the following year. Thompson defended himself demanding proof from his accusers. As they had none, he was set free, but without the satisfaction of a public acquittal.

Thompson protested his complete innocence and professed loyalty to the rebel cause. One biographer claims that following the battle of Bunker Hill (June 15, 1775), he was "favorably introduced by some officers at Cambridge to General Washington". Indeed, it was even rumored that he be given a command in the Colonial Army. He the famous La Motte spy trial featuring three principals operating a French spy ring in the British Navy that included Francis Hentry, who turned King's evidence and was deported, and a third man who was not named or prosecuted. Some thought the third man was Thompson. As S.C. Brown wrote: "We will probably never know whether or not there was any truth to this allegation, but it is important to our understanding of Thompson that many of his peers believed it."

He could apply science to life, but had not found a science for living.

wrote to his old friend Major Loammi Baldwin, of Woburn, an intelligence officer on the other side who was presumably realized that he was a spy, enclosing samples of epaulets for officers and soldiers of the local rebel army and adding discreetly "whether it is proper or not show them to General Washington. I leave to your judgement. I apprehend the price ought to be somewhere about 15- or perhaps as low as 13-6, if a larger number were engaged.

Espionage

Proof of Thompson's espionage lies among the Gage manuscripts kept in the William L. Clement Library at the University of Michigan: a letter in invisible ink in Thompson's disguised hand with the signature erased, dated May 6, 1775, and addressed to Gage about rebel troop strategy and morale. Egon Larsen goes so far in his recent biography of Rumford to ask "whether the decisive information which led to the battles of Lexington and Concord was not sent by Him."

However this was only Thompson's official duplicity, his private was no less brazen. "As to my maintaining a correspondence with Governor Gage (he wrote to his father-in-law, a firebrand preacher for liberty on August 14, 1775), this part of the charge is entirely without foundation as I never received a Letter from him in my life; nor did I ever write him one, except about half a dozen lines which I sent him just before I left Concord may be called a Letter, and which contained no intelligence, nor anything of a public nature..." And he concluded with the pious wish addressed to the old clergyman "that the happy times may soon come when I may return to my family in peace and safety, and when every individual in America may sit down under his own Fig-tree, and have none to make him afraid..." Thompson himself never had this wish fulfilled and he must have counted himself lucky not to have swung from the branch of some stout American tree with a noose around his neck. As it was, he was forced to flee, first to the British in Boston and then when Washington drove Gage into the sea, on to England.

In London, Thompson reported in person to Lord George Germain, Secretary for the Colonies, an incompetent minister, but to the young American, a generous patron-appointing him Secretary for Georgia, a province long since lost to the British Crown, and later Under-Secretary of State for the Northern Department. Germain, to whom Thompson acted as an advisor, also enabled his protégé to conduct scientific experiments on gunpowder, on the velocity of projectiles, first at his country seat, Stoneland Lodge, and then on board Victory under the command of Sir Charles Hardy.

In the summer of 1781 occurred before. As Benjamin Tallmadge reported to Washington on February 21, 1783: "Col. Thompson's Regt. of Horse live upon the Inhabitants as they please, and commit the gravest acts of violence." The peace treaty was signed at Versailles in September 1783. Thompson had already returned to England and obtained permission to serve abroad. He crossed the channel on the same boat as the historian Gibbon who

John A.S. Phillips

About the Author

John A.S. Phillips was born in London, England, 23 March 1934, attended preparatory schools and later Charterhouse public school before doing his national service in The Royal Army Service Corps in England and after being commissioned 2nd Lieutenant in Singapore.

On return to the United Kingdom Phillips prepared for entry to Christ Church (College) Oxford. Before going up to Oxford he worked his passage to South America and back as a supernumerary on board a merchant navy ship.

Interrupting his studies at Oxford, Phillips sought practical experience as a managerial trainee in a large store before returning to university finish his degree in Philosophy, Constitutional History and Modern Languages. He received the Bachelor and Master of Art Degrees. Thereafter he worked for a refugee organization, Lifeline, in West Germany where he decided to stay and resume his studies at Munich University. He read German Literature for a number of years concentrating on private research into the writer Theodor Fontane on whom Phillips published papers.

Munich gave him the opportunity to develop his interest in writing and broadcasting. He became a regular contributor to a local historical journal Bayerland and wrote programmes for the Schools Programme of Radio Bavaria (later, while working as a University Lecturer). In the meantime he published in other English and German newspapers and journals devoting more time to book reviewing for English, German and now latterly American publications including The Christian Science Monitor and The Boston Globe.

Phillips's interest in Benjamin Thompson, Count Rumford, dated from his Munich days and has been strengthened during his recent visits to Boston where his own grandfather was born. John Phillips is especially interested in local American opinion of Rumford and the phenomenon of the American Loyalist which is so relevant to the history of Boston and environs.

OBSOLETE THESE DAYS BY SNOW, the statue of Benjamin Thompson (Count Rumford) is often debated by colonial history buffs as to whether it is a statue on the Woburn Public Library grounds to a learned administrator-scientist or to a traitor? A similar statue can be found in Munich, Germany. (Burnett)

Tidbits from history

FM TALK: Our roving correspondent is feeling a bit under the weather this week, so until he returns to his usual peppy self here are some of those offbeat tidbits of American history to mull over:

J. Edgar Hoover was considered by his colleagues and underlings to be obsessively superstitious. For example, Hoover refused to allow anybody to walk on his shadow.

Richard Nixon was known to make some pretty strange demands from time to time, too. Just prior to his 1972 inaugural parade, for instance, he requested that Pennsylvania Avenue be sprayed with a special chemical to keep the pigeons away. He was paranoid that one of those insensitive creatures would make an untimely swoop down over his limousine and embarrass him on national television.

The White House Plumbers got their nickname in a bizarre fashion: the grandmother of one of the men read in the New York Times that her grandson had been

Life support ambulance service proposed

An Advanced Life Support (ALS) ambulance service equipped to provide sophisticated emergency medical care in the field could begin serving 10 northern and western suburban communities soon through an arrangement with a consortium of hospitals in the area.

The consortium developing the project is made up of Winchester Hospital, the Lahey Clinic Medical Center in Burlington, and Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc., which includes the Choate Hospital Division in Woburn and the Symmes Hospital Division in Arlington.

The consortium envisions developing an ALS system for the communities of Arlington, Bedford, Billerica, Burlington, Lexington, North Reading, Reading, Wilmington, Winchester and Woburn.

"Advanced Life Support considerably expands the sophistication of emergency care that is available to trauma and heart attack victims before they reach the hospital," said consortium Chairman Neil Stroman, Choate-Symmes' vice-president for Clinical Services.

The ALS system is not intended to replace the Basic Life Support (BLS) care currently provided by Basic Emergency Medicine Technicians (EMT's) working for police or fire department ambulance services in each of the communities involved.

Rather, the paramedic-staffed Advanced Life Support Service will supplement BLS services for the 10 to 15 percent of all emergency medical calls that would benefit from ALS capabilities. These include cardiac arrest, trauma, drowning, and severe respiratory distress cases.

"The great majority of emergency calls are appropriate for care by BLS units, and the existing town ambulance services provide this care well," Stroman said. "However, statistics from areas that have ALS indicate that the availability of these services results in a substantial drop in the proportion of fatalities or serious injury."

"The paramedics of an ALS unit have 1,500 hours of training in emergency care, the capability of initiating many kinds of therapy on the spot, under physician controls or clear-cut guidelines, and the technology for both providing this sophisticated care and communicating with emergency physicians at a base hospital," he explained.

"Not only are they able to talk with emergency departments by radio, they are able to transmit ECG's (electrocardiographic readings), for the physicians' analysis."

The consortium is currently in communication with officials of each of the 10 localities regarding a proposal that would have the Chaulk Ambulance Company of Newton establish an ambulance unit in the area to provide ALS care. Physician control of the unit will rotate monthly among the emergency departments at the member hospitals. Chaulk has operated a similar service in Newton for the past year.

Initially it is expected that the ALS unit will respond to five or six calls a day from throughout the region. Discussions of details are just beginning with the communities. Since the Chaulk company will bill directly for its services, the project will not entail funding from any of the municipalities or hospitals.

Solar heat effective investment

The increasing number of solar heat and hot water systems visible in our neighborhoods indicates that solar energy systems are an increasingly cost effective investment for homeowners. Indeed, an estimated 12,000 solar systems have been installed in Massachusetts through 1983. But solar systems are not a good investment for everyone. Unlike conventional heat and hot water systems, the performance of a solar system is dependent upon several factors specific to your home's site, orientation to the sun, and your use of the home.

Liver transplants

Recently, a New England Deaconess Hospital patient became that medical center's first patient to receive a liver transplant, and only the second person in New England in 20 years to undergo this procedure.

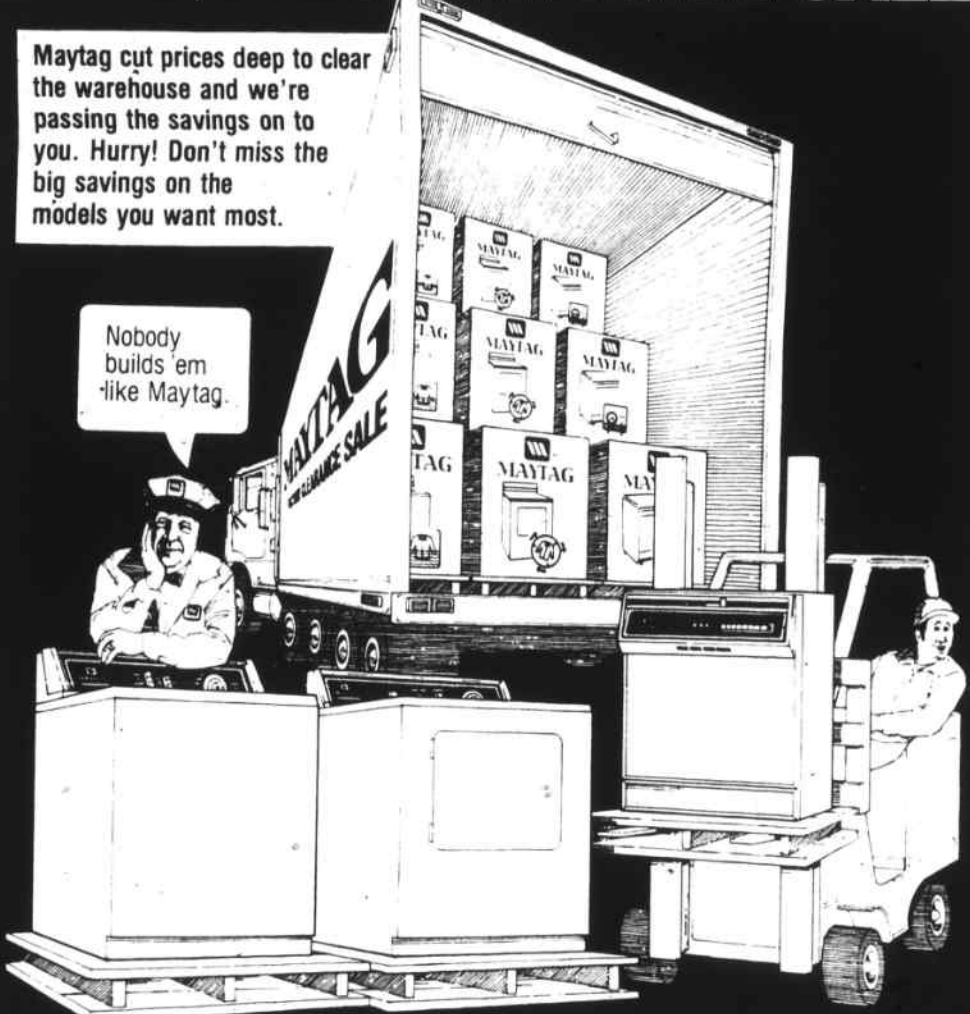

Newsworthy because of its infrequency in New England, there is another aspect of liver transplantation worth noting — its impact on an already strained blood supply.

"This one patient alone received blood products from the equivalent of more than 100 donors," said Peter L. Page, M.D., Chief Medical Director for American Red Cross Blood Services — Northeast Region, the two-state region of Maine and Massachusetts. "And this figure represents transfusions only during surgery. This patient continues to require more blood transfusions just as other liver recipients have in the past. Since surgery he has received blood products from an additional 50 donors so far," Page continued.

"This is an excellent example of how one patient can have a significant impact on the blood supply," noted Page, "especially during the summer months when our collections can drop dramatically." With the latest blood collections figures dropping on the average of more than five percent per day, figures indicate that this summer is no exception.

Northeast Region distributes approximately 400,000 units of blood and blood products annually, and relies solely upon the support from healthy volunteer donors to meet patients' blood needs.

Tory --Count

reported in a letter to Lord Sheffield: "The Triumvirate of the memorable embarkation will consist of the Grand Gibbon, Henry Lauens Esqr. President of Congress, and Mr. Secretary, Colopel, Admiral, Philosopher Thompson (sic) attended by three horses who are not the most agreeable fellow-passengers."

Turning Point

On arrival in Strasbourg Thompson attended a parade by the Duke Maximilian of Deux-Ponts to whom he was presented and who gave him a letter of recommendation to his uncle, the reigning Elector of Bavaria, Charles Theodore. Thompson, still a soldier, preferred to travel eastward in search of active service.

It was then in Vienna that the turning-point came in his career: "I owe it to a beneficent Deity (he wrote later) that I was cured in season of this mental folly. I met, at the house of the Prince of Kaunitz, a lady, aged seventy years, of infinite spirit and full of information. She was the wife of General Bourghausen. The Emperor, Joseph II, came often to pass the evening with her. This excellent person conceived a regard for me; she opened my eyes to other kinds of glory than that of a victory in battle."

Thompson now returned to England to seek the King's permission to enter the service of Elector Charles Theodore of Bavaria. George III gave his consent and knighted Thompson for past services to the Crown. It was also arranged that Sir Benjamin would turn over Bavarian state secrets to the British Government, particularly in regard to foreign policy.

He arranged to keep the British Ambassador in Vienna, Sir Robert Keith, informed, suggesting in a letter of May 1784 that "as we are acquainted with each other's handwriting any signature in the future will be unnecessary; and Tho' I should date my Letters from Strasbourg or from Francfort, your Excellency will not be at a loss to know from whom from whence they came." However, once Thompson had committed himself to the Elector's service, he was careful to reveal very little to London, much to British annoyance. Revenge came later, when George III refused to accept Thompson as Bavarian Ambassador at the Court of St. James's in 1798.

Although he might have decided to give up "martial folly", his interest in military matters remained undiminished. His first great public work (1788-1792) in Bavaria was to reform the army, but primarily for non-military duties. Hitherto the common soldier had been cruelly exploited. Only paid a pittance, he was expected to pay for his uniform and was thus forced to borrow from his officer to whom he remained in debt for the rest of his service. The army enjoyed little prestige amongst the people and, as Thompson pointed out, "men who had committed theft and other disgracing crimes... were sent into this army as punishment."

Thompson's reforms changed all this. Uniforms were provided free on enlistment, pay was increased and much was done for the soldier's comfort, education, general welfare and entertainment.

When not required on regimental duties, soldiers were encouraged to work elsewhere. Whilst they continued to receive bread and lodging, their pay was stopped.

In all, it was a very economically run army: "I have endeavored in all my operations to unite the interest of the soldier with the interest of civil society, and to render the military force, even in time of peace, subservient to the public good," he wrote.

He used soldiers to build roads, drain marshes and work as simple laborers, which was unpopular with the soldiers concerned, but he did ensure that they were able to grow their own food by providing them with gardens. He even suggested what they should grow. Hitherto methods of cultivation had been very backward and Thompson found "that even the potato, that most useful of all products of the ground, is scarcely known there." However, the most important garden of all with which Thompson and his soldiers were concerned was the area later called the English Garden. The army provided the labor; Thompson the inspiration; and the royal gardener the skill and the detailed plan for which has proved to this day to be one of the joys of Munich. It was, and still is, a Volksgarten — a garden for the people laid out in the English style on what was formerly most unhospitable marshy ground. Thompson intended the English Garden to be linked with the palace gardens, although his plan was not fulfilled. It was the whole idea of giving something to the people, a park where they could relax and enjoy the beauty of nature that was so novel for the times.

CHIMNEY SWEEPS swarmed all over the Benjamin Thompson home on Elm Street.

North Woburn at a recent meeting. Thompson was born in North Woburn.

Good Works

This was only the beginning of Thompson's good works. His solution to the appalling problem of mendicancy in Bavaria was the next: about hordes of beggars he wrote: "these detestable vermin swarmed everywhere importuning people in the streets even interrupting worshippers at church during the service and worst of all maiming their own children to excite the pity and commiseration of the public."

Thompson had them all rounded up on New Year's Day 1790 and given employment in the House of Industry making cloth for the army and the poor in other parts of Europe. Thompson ensured that they were adequately paid and kindly treated. He provided them with his own nutritious soups, cooked on his specially designed fuel-saving stoves in a building lit by his own special method of lighting. It was the practical application of science for the good of the community. He was a social engineer and a great benefactor too. Was it all from the head, or from the heart as well?

"Would to God I were able to do justice to this subject!" (he commented later)...The exquisite delight which a sensible mind must feel upon seeing many hundreds of wretched beings awaking from a state of misery and inactivity, as from a dream, and applying themselves with cheerfulness to the employments of useful industry, upon seeing the first dawn of pacid content break upon a countenance covered with habitual gloom and furrowed and distorted by misery, — this is easier to be conceived than described."

Or later when describing the attitude of some of the former female beggars who "now recognized me as their benefactor; and, with tears dropping fast from their cheeks, continued their work in the most expressive silence... It was not possible to be mistaken with respect to the real state of the minds of these poor people. Everything about them showed that they deeply affected with the kindness shown them; and that their hearts were really softened, appeared, not only from the effusions of their affectionate regard for those who were dear to them. In short, never did I witness such affectioning scenes as passed between some of these poor people and their children."

This fitting his basic philosophy in running the House of Industry, he wrote "to make vicious and abandoned people happy, it has generally been supposed necessary, first, to make them virtuous. But why not reverse this order! Why not make them first happy, and then virtuous! And later, 'were in this asylum for the indigent and unfortunate, no ill usage, no harsh language, is permitted. During five years that the establishment has existed, not a blow has been given to anyone, not even to a child by his instructor."

Surely for those days, this was novel indeed. But there was no nonsense either: "NO ALMS WILL BE RECEIVED HERE" was the inscription over the main entrance and Thompson believed that "cleanliness was next to godliness": "virtue never dwelt long with filth and hastiness; nor do I believe there ever was a person scrupulously attentive to cleanliness who was a consummate villain." And in the long footnote Thompson talks of "those great benefactors of mankind, who, by the instruction of peace and order in society, have laboured successfully to promote the happiness of their fellow creatures."

One is tempted to ask, was the former spy and traitor, graveyard baker and deserter from his wife and child reformed by reforming others?

Were the demonstrations of affection by grateful Munich beggars compensation for the love he had forfeited in his own country?

Were all his good works a form of penance, even one long publicity stunt, a refined form of self-advancement? "It was as if while he had been rendering all these services to his fellow-men he had no real love or regard for them" commented many years later Baron Cuvier, Secretary of the French Institution and an intimate friend of Thompson's.

Whatever Thompson's personal feelings may have been, his attitude to those whom he helped was essentially that of the reformer and educator: he preferred solutions to sympathy. Interested in "teaching the application of science to the useful purposes of life", he saw room for improvement all around him, whether it was beggars who needed work, or ordinary people living in insufficiently heated and smokey houses cooking on inefficient stoves; he saw society — high and low — ignorant of the practical value of science.

Jealous

In Munich his time was running out. People were grateful for his help, but jealous of his success his associates were.

In October 1795 while on a visit to London to publish his essays, Thompson was robbed — he assumed with government connivance — of a number of valuable documents outside St. Paul's. Next year he was called back to Munich to prevent the sack of that city which lay so invitingly between the opposing French and Austrian armies. With a combination of courage and tact he saved Munich, both armies being content to glare at each other across the Isar River outside the city walls with hardly a shot being fired. "Not only Munich, but Bavaria, and the National Honour, have been preserved by my Prudent and Spirited exertions" he reported no so very modestly.

It was in England the same year that he contacted a fellow countryman, Thomas Bernard, the son of Sir Francis Bernard, formerly Governor of New Jersey, making suggestions which led to the founding of the "Society of Bettering the Condition and Increasing the Comforts of the Poor" which in turn led Rumford, as he was now called, to propose the founding of an institution for "teaching the application of science to the useful purposes of life" which was to incorporate a library, lecture hall, laboratories and a standing exhibition of the latest tools, engines and other implements which would not only be a medium of instruction for society but also for the ordinary man in the street, particularly for the artisan and mechanic who could thus improve the quality of his workmanship.

Rumford was able to obtain the patronage of society. The inaugural meeting was held in Sir Joseph Banks's house. Banks the influential President of the Royal Society, to whom Rumford had introduced himself by submitting various scientific papers years before, was a stalwart supporter of his. The second Lady Palmerston, nee Mee, married to the second Viscount, was another. Rumford had a great reputation as a ladies' man, and it was suggested that his friendship with Lady Palmerston was a particularly intimate one. His letters to her about his work are of great importance. On the death of her husband, she made a copy of Rumford's journal, "an occupation (she wrote on the cover) which has served to beguile some moments which otherwise would have passed in ceaseless sorrow."

As with other members of the aristocracy, he redesigned the fires and stoves, getting rid of the smoke which the inefficient fires of those days gave off like bonfires inside people's homes.

"It is hard now (wrote J.H. Plumb in England in the Eighteenth Century) to recapture the intensity of belief and faith that the accumulation would bring both to the nation and to the individual wealth, success, and happiness... In these years science was woven into

WORK PROGRAM FOR THE RETIRED

Retired Senior Citizens of the Merrimack Valley are being called out of employment retirement into volunteer work at the Charisma Institute, 459 River Road, Andover, Massachusetts. "We need them, and they need us," stated Fr. Lucius Annese, O.F.M. Director of Charisma Institute. "There is so much talent out there and it is a shame it is being wasted. We certainly can use the retired to help our cause. I know they will be very comfortable with us."

The retired may come to the Institute any Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday from 1:00 to 3:00 P.M. to help out with all kinds of chores. They are welcome to use the recreation room which has two bowling alleys, a pool table, a ping pong table, etc. They may also use the beautiful, traditional chapel of St. Francis. The grounds are spacious and the scenery is just invigorating. For further information write to Charisma Institute, P.O. Box 263, Andover, Ma. 01810 or just call 1-851-7910.

STOP SMOKING CLINIC

A highly successful stop smoking program is coming to the Melrose-Wakefield Hospital, announced Philip L. Carlman, National Director of The Stop Smoking Clinic. A free introductory session will be held at 7:00 and 8:30 p.m., Monday, January 30, at the Melrose-Wakefield Hospital, 535 Lebanon Street, Melrose. This first free session will be an informative one hour overview of The Stop Smoking Clinic's program at no cost or obligation.

The Stop Smoking Clinic is a non-profit community service which helps people learn how to stop smoking. The month long program, which meets twice weekly, is taught by highly trained former smokers who quit smoking through this program. The program uses group and individualized methods to help each student overcome his or her smoking habit.

The program is unique in many ways. It enjoys a long-term success rate which is triple that of programs once recommended by national health experts. The Stop Smoking Clinic also offers a "Hotline" to each student and graduate, providing constant support for their new smoke-free lives.

"We are especially proud of the fact that since we began The Stop Smoking Clinic, more than 5,000 smokers have learned to break their habit," said Carlman. "More impressive is the fact that in our six years of experience, over 98 percent of our students have been fully satisfied with our program."

PAINT WITH AEROSOL
"Aerosol Painting" will be presented in the Harbor Gallery through February 10. With the artists presence, the reception will occur on February 2, at 4 p.m. — 7 p.m. in the Gallery.

Joe Santal has been a local artist for 15 years Santal's work challenges the assumption that paper should necessarily be flat. Using aerosol paints, the artist explores the plastic nature of the paper. The paint captures the 3-dimensional state of the material. Brought back to its 2-dimensional state, the paper represents an interplay of dimensions.

Gallery Hours are: Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. — 5 p.m. The Harbor Campus, UMass-Boston, Building 020, Dorchester. Contact Antony Dodds at 929-8282, or ext. 8260.

"Travels at Home and Abroad," an exhibition of nearly 30 photographs by Marvin Breckinridge, a widely-published photo-journalist of the 1930s, will be on display at Tufts University's Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy Feb. 2 — March 19. Some photographs are scenes of such faraway lands as Africa, Finland and West Indies; others depict the work of the Frontier Nursing Service, through which nurses traversed Appalachia by horseback to provide medical care to residents. The photographs will be on display in the third floor lobby of the Cabot Intercultural Center on Tufts' Medford campus and in the Fletcher School's Edwin Ginn Library, also located in the Cabot Center.

HAMMOND CASTLE

"Lion in Winter" will be presented at Hammond Castle Museum in Gloucester by the Cape Ann Theater on January 26, 27, 28 and February 2, 3 and 4 at 8:00 P.M. The castle provides a superb backdrop for James Goldman's play, which portrays the tumultuous relationship of Henry

II of England and Eleanor of Aquitaine in the 12th century. Eleanor, one of history's most spirited figures, was kept imprisoned by Henry during the last 15 years of his reign. "Lion in Winter" recounts one of the Plantagenet Christmas reunions, when Eleanor was released for a brief period. She devoted her energies to plotting and scheming for the inheritance of her favored son, Richard the Lionhearted, and her own freedom. She met her match in Henry, one of England's most formidable rulers.

"Lion in Winter" will be directed by Christina Thibodeau, assisted by Ginny Linsky. Michael McNamara will play Henry II, Deborah Kidder will play Eleanor of Aquitaine. The play will also feature John Hart as Richard, Thomas Vawter as Geoffrey, David Schwartz as John, Karen Moore as Alais and Jeffery Karl as King Philip of France.

Tickets for "Lion in Winter" are $6, $8 for preferred seating. A reduced ticket price of $5 will be offered for Thursday performances on January 26th and February 2nd. For reservations and additional information, please call 283-7673.

3-D EXHIBIT

Local residents have only two weeks left to see the 3-D exhibit at Boston's Museum of Science. The last day is Feb. 5.

A Museum exclusive, the exhibit was assembled for a one-time showing and will not travel elsewhere.

The exhibit presents the work of some 50 leading artists, photographers, technicians, and scientists from this country and abroad. A highlight is a 15 minute slide show with music, displaying a variety of images by several American and Canadian photographers.

Visitors put on 3-D glasses to view the show. Other unusual components include a 3-D television prototype, a 3-D video game, and holograms. With diagrams and explanatory labels, the exhibit explains how binocular vision is achieved and demonstrates that seeing in 3-D requires two pictures, one for each eye, taken from different angles.

Visitors discovered that the current interest in 3-D is a continuation of a popular fascination that began in the mid-19th century with stereoscopic instruments. Several of these antique viewers are on display in a case near the Museum's lobby. The collection is on loan from Paul Wing, Hingham.

Museum hours are: Tuesday-Thursday, 9-4; Friday, 9-10; Saturday, 9-5; Sunday, 10-5. Admission is $5 adults; $3 ages 5-16 and 65 and over; $4 students with ID, and Friday evening, 5-10 p.m. half-price for all categories. For recorded information, call 742-6088.

Your family may soon be able to pay less for long distance calls.

Roving

Working on leaks at the White House, and wrote to him that his grandfather would have been proud of him, since he was a plumber also.

It was only in 1974 that the Texas legislature finally repealed a 137 year old law that made it legal for a husband to kill his wife's lover if he found them together in the act of making love. Those Texans enjoy doing things on a grand scale, don't they?

One of the last pieces of business conducted by Gerald Ford on the final day of his term as president was to grant a full pardon to a woman by the name of Iva Toguri D'Aquino, better known as Tokyo Rose, whose voice was heard throughout World War II broadcasting Japanese propaganda to American soldiers in the Pacific theatre.

This columnist had the opportunity to interview Billy Carter for this paper in 1979. During the interview Billy revealed, of all things, that he was deathly allergic to peanuts!

The often-pictured rug in the Green Room at the White House features an eagle clutching an olive branch on one side and arrows on the other, the familiar Presidential Seal. It was Harry Truman who realized one day that the head of the eagle was facing the wrong way. Instead of pointing in the direction of the olive branch, it was turned toward the arrows. Truman immediately ordered that the rug be re-sewn so that the eagle's head faced the proper direction.

The New Deal Democrats were once charged by the Daughters of the American Revolution that they'd stolen gold from Fort Knox. When Dwight Eisenhower, the first Republican president in two decades, took office in 1953, the Daughters coerced him into having the gold counted. The investigators discovered that the Fort held $30,442,415,581.70 worth of gold, just ten dollars less than what was supposed to be in reserve. It was reported that one of the Daughters then commented to President Eisenhower, "See, I told you those Democrats were thieves," prompting Mrs. Georgia Clark, treasurer of the U.S. under the Democrats, to forward a check to the government to cover the shortage.

E. Howard Hunt, the famous Watergate burglar, once told friends that he had only one regret in his life, that he'd once felt sorry for a group of prisoners he'd taken captive during the CIA-backed coup against the leftist government in Guatemala in 1954 and set them free. One of those prisoners turned out to be Che Guevara, the Cuban revolutionary. Hunt swore after that that he would never again allow himself to be swayed by feelings of compassion.

"Roosevelt proved a man could be President for life; Truman proved anybody could be President; and Eisenhower proved you don't need to have a President." — Republican Senator Kenneth Keating. Make it a good week.

H TECH

A major reason for New England's strong performance in the recent recession was its high technology industry. Whether this industry can solve the problems of the Great Lakes states is the subject of an article in the latest issue of the New England Economic Review published by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston. The author of the article, Lynn Browne, Vice President and Economist at the Bank, concludes that increased employment in high tech industries will only be a small part of the answer for the Great Lakes area's current economic difficulties because the region's occupational distribution does not have a high proportion of professionals and technicians. But most importantly, Ms. Browne says, there are simply not enough high tech jobs to go around. The answer to the Great Lakes economic difficulties, she writes, will be a combination of continued out-migration, a slowing in the growth of the labor force, the expansion of the nonmanufacturing sector and finally an improved economic performance from its smokestack industries.

the fabric of the nation's life." Was there ever a more fervent believer or accomplished practitioner than Sir Benjamin Thompson, Count Rumford of the Holy Empire, administrator, philanthropist, soldier and scientist? He was an expert on heat, proving that it was motion (energy) and not a weightless fluid (caloric) or a substance released "during combustion (philologist). He invented the Rumford Lamp, a refinement of the Argand Burner. He designed his own photometer to measure the intensity of light; also his own coffee percolator; his own celebrated Rumford Roaster, stove and fireplace; Rumford soups were also known throughout Europe.

In a letter dated 2 February 1799 Rumford explains his plans for setting up his institution: "I shall depend on you and on Lord Palmerston to give your support to this most useful and most interesting scheme." They did wholeheartedly, as did many of the aristocracy. Royal Patronage was obtained in 1799, and it became known as the Royal Institution. It was the zenith of his career restoring his self-confidence at not being accepted as Bavarian envoy the year before. "They would not receive me as Minister here, but seem disposed not to make it up to me by the respect the show the Institution," he wrote to his daughter. This success also decided him against returning to America where following delicate negotiations at the highest level, he had been offered a seniormilitary post at last point.

Whereas the founding of the Royal Institution remained Rumford's great work, he was not able to use it as a medium for improving the conditions of the poorer classes by providing there "a collection of Models of useful Mechanical Inventions with Work-Shops for giving instructions to Tradesmen and Manufacturers."

There were other problems too.

No details were to minor for Rumford's attention. He concerned himself with hiring not only lecturers but porters too. The Royal Institution had the full benefit of his undivided attention and it creaked under the strain. The first resident lecturer, Thoms Garnett, falsely ascribed Count Alessandro Volta's invention of an electric battery "to the French" which infuriated Banks and Rumford. Ultimately Garnett left. The porter and the housekeeper gave trouble and had to leave, too. But Rumford's greatest satisfaction and triumph was to engage the services of Humphrey Davy and Thomas Young which thus set the future scientific tone of the Royal Institution.

Rumford's frustration at not being able to incorporate a permanent exhibition in the Institution was alleviated by turning his own house in Brompton Row into a semi "Ideal Home Exhibition" which M.A. Pictet, editor of the Bibliothèque Britannique, estatically described as an "Elysium", an "agreeable and ingenious structure....Everything that concerns the use of fuel, whether for the kitchen or for warmth, has been carried to the highest degree of economy and perfection....The ingenious and tasteful arrangements in that house made it for several years one of the most attractive objects for the curious sightseers; and the Count's gratification, and perhaps his love of appreciation, was ministered to in having the edifice freely exhibited to visitors from all classes of society to examine it."

This surely was the real Rumford, not so much the ex-spy and traitor to his country (that was not forgotten, but it was forgiven and was never to be proven in his lifetime); no, it was the ex-schoolmaster and reformer as one person showing and telling others how to live, using his own home with a Rumford Kitchen, Stove, iron lamp and patent collapsible sofa-bed, but with little human warmth or light. He could apply science to life, but had not found a science for living. He strove to introduce order into the lives of others — his last written work was to be "On the Nature and Effects of Order" — without having ordered his own.

He was a member of society without being social. He lectured rather than talked, explaining everything to the uninitiated in meticulous detail.

"My Rumford would make me very happy (complained his second wife) could he but keep quiet."

He had married Anne, the widow of the celebrated Antoine Laurent Lavoisier, known as the father of modern chemistry, who was so ignobly guillotined after the French Revolution. As ill-luck would have it, Lavoisier had been a champion of the caloric theory of heat which Rumford had so convincingly demolished with his own experiments. And Rumford could not resist continuing to point out the weakness of the caloric theory in public, which enraged Anne.

It seemed but poetic justice when she, "the female dragon", poured the best example of the disputed element heat she could find — boiling water — over his favorite flowers the night he locked her dinner guests out of the house. It was said that on another occasion the enraged count had to be restrained by the Bavarian Minister, M. de Marbois, for attacking his wife with an iron bar. They were divorced in June 1809.

In any case the Persians were more restrained in showing their respect for Rumford and more ribald in making fun of him. There was the joke of a workman so blinded by the light of his Rumford lamp that he could not find his way home and had to stay out all night, and soldiers would refer to an unappetizing meal as being prepared "a la Rumford". (Cobbett had already termed his soups "dirt and bones") and Parisians also laughed at the extra broad-rimmed wheels of his carriage and at the wearing of his white clothes in winter because he believed white repelled "frigorific rays". It was easy to make fun of such an eccentric man. His star was also on the wane, although it shone brightly again whenever his work obtained recognition at the Institute of France to which he had first been elected in 1801. However it was not the recognition bordering an adulation which he had enjoyed in England or Bavaria.

Sudden Death

His sudden death surprised everybody. He died on August 21, 1814 of a seizure in the presence of his mistress Victoire Lefevre who had born him a son the previous October.

Strange rumors circulated.

The caretaker's wife believed, quotes one biographer, "the Count was not really dead". His daughter, Sally, would not believe it either when her stepmother, Anne, broke the news: "Died! I do not believe him to be dead, no more than I am at this moment!" But he was. Of all the tributes which were paid to his memory, surely none would have pleased him more than the inscription on the monument to his work in Munich's English Garden:—

"To him who rooted out the most disgraceful public evils, — Idleness and Mendicancy: who gave to the poor, relief, occupation and good morals, and to the Youth of the Fatherland so many schools of Instruction. Go, Saunterer! and strive to equal him in Spirit and Deed, and us in Gratitude."

And finally, in our time, Franklin D. Roosevelt said, "Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin and Count Rumford are the three greatest minds that America has produced." (Benjamin Thompson the spy was simply not mentioned).

Choate-Symmes offers life support CPR courses

Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc., will offer two Basic Life Support CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) courses at the Symmes Hospital Division in Arlington during the month of February. Classes will be held on Tuesday evenings February 14, 21 and 28, and on Wednesday evenings February 8, 15, and 22. All classes will meet from 7 to 10 p.m.

Basic life support techniques included in the course are artificial respiration (mouth to mouth breathing) and artificial circulation (chest compressions) for use in treating victims of heart attack, drowning, choking and other life threatening emergencies. Students are also taught to recognize early symptoms of heart attack, how to reassure the victim, and methods of obtaining emergency assistance.

The course includes lectures, films, slide presentations, demonstrations of techniques, and practice by the students in rescue breathing and heart compressions on life-like manikins. The course is designed by the American Heart Association, and is taught by American Heart Association certified instructors.

Two four-hour CPR recertification classes are also scheduled for those whose CPR certification expires in February. Attendance at one class is required for recertification.

Classes are offered on Monday, February 13, and Wednesday, February 29. Both classes are scheduled from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m.

The fee for the Basic Life Support course is $15.00, and for recertification, $8.00. Pre-registration is required, and all courses are offered on a first come, first serve basis. For additional information or registration, contact the Choate-Symmes Community Relations Department, 646-1500, Extension 1442.

Ground crews monitor satellites round-the-clock until they are established in orbit. They have to be, because of temperatures and voltages of electronic systems, always critical with machines whose sunward side may be 300 degrees hotter than the shaded part, says National Geographic.

United States horse breeders first imported Belgian draft horses about 100 years ago. The large horses are good-natured, strong, and take readily to farm work. National Geographic World reports that a Belgian draft horse can outweigh the average quarter horse by 1,000 pounds.

Ordinary taxpayers can keep more earnings

By Thomas Watterson
Staff writer of The Christian Science Monitor

"There is nothing sinister in so arranging one's affairs as to keep taxes as low as possible. Everybody does so, rich or poor, and all do right."

To the "poor," or those of only modest means, the words of noted American jurist Learned Hand may seem a bit hollow. What, after all, can anyone but the rich do to "arrange one's affairs to keep taxes as low as possible?"

It turns out there are several things people in moderate income brackets can do to reduce the federal tax bite. Some are simple and require nothing more than filling out a few forms at a bank, brokerage, or insurance company; others require a little more effort.

• IRAs. The easiest all-income tax shelter, a 1981 gift from Congress to anyone who earns wages or a salary, is the individual retirement account (IRA). By putting up to $2,000 a year (yes, you can put in less) into an IRA, you can reduce your taxable income by the amount deposited, whether or not you itemize deductions. If you are married and your spouse doesn't work, you can deposit up to $2,250. If you both work, two separate IRAs can hold a total of $4,000.

'One of the most important techniques is shifting income between family members.'

Until you retire, this money earns interest free of federal taxes.

IRAs are available to all, no matter what the income, so even the "poor" can start them with a few dollars a year to build up a savings habit, as well as the beginnings of a retirement fund.

• Keoghs. A close relative of the IRA, the Keogh is for people who are self-employed. But it can also be used by people who have a fair amount of outside, or freelance, income. The lesser of 15 percent or $15,000 of income can be put into the Keogh; for this year, the maximum goes up to $30,000. If you haven't opened a Keogh yet, you won't be able to put any 1983 contributions into it now; they must be opened by the end of the calendar year. IRAs for 1983, however, can be opened anytime until you file your return.

• 401(k)s. Also known as salary-reduction plans, these look similar to IRAs but have some important differences. First, they must be sponsored by an employer, and the annual deposit limits are higher. Another important difference is that money deposited in a 401(k) comes out of your pay before any federal or social security taxes are taken out, thus putting you in a lower effective tax bracket throughout the year.

In addition to putting some of your own money in the 401(k), your employer almost always has a matching amount to put in. This match usually ranges from 1 to 3 or 4 percent.

• Shifting income. "One of the most important techniques is shifting income between years and between family members," says Jonathan Flitter, manager of employee benefits in the Boston office of Touche Ross, the accounting firm.

As tax rates and tax brackets have declined over the past three years, Mr. Flitter explained, it has become an annual fact that if you can take any income in a later year, you'll pay less tax on it than if you take it in the earlier year. So if your boss is planning on giving you a year end bonus, ask him to hold it until January. If you do any free-lance work and you can get the client to pay you in January instead of December, the taxes on it will be lower. And, if you want to sell some stocks, it may make more sense to sell these securities in the next year — particularly if you've had a gain — than in the current year.

As for relatives, Mr. Flitter notes, taxpayers will often do better if they can find ways to shift some of their income to relatives, such as children, who are in lower brackets. Something as conservative as a mutual fund, for example, might be taken out in the child's name. Then, any money it earns while the child is growing up would be taxed at the lower rate.

You can also shift additional income or any sudden windfalls to your children's brackets through Unified Gifts to Minors Act custodial accounts, Clifford trusts, or interest-free demand loans. A qualified tax attorney or tax lawyer should be consulted before setting these up.

There is also the gift-tax exclusion, which allows you to give $10,000 a year ($20,000 for a married couple) to children, or any recipient, free of gift tax. The children must pay tax on the gift, but again,

Expenses for charitable work, such as driving for the Red Cross, may be deductible their lower bracket eases the burden.

• Charitable contributions. Americans are a generous lot. Some 90 percent of the money that goes to private charities comes not from corporations but from individuals. For its part, the US government does what it can to encourage giving: Charitable contributions are the only deduction allowed on the simplified 1040EZ form.

So there is no reason contributions cannot be used to the taxpayer's advantage. If you think you are going to have more income this year than next, for instance (a situation that will probably be more evident later in the year), you can make your 1984 and 1985 contributions this year. Some people, in fact, alternate their contributing years, making little or no contributions in one year, and double-size donations in the other year.

If you do any volunteer work for your charity, there are specific things that can be deducted. Deductible items include expenses for transportation, food, and lodging while away from home as well as uniforms, equipment, and supplies, if these expenses were incurred for a qualified organization. If you use your own car for the volunteer work, you can deduct 9 cents a mile for its use.

• Income averaging. In recent years, many families have added a wage earner, when the wife, for example, returned to the work force. This may result in a substantial change in the family's taxable income. To help taxpayers spread the effects of such a change over several years, the IRS permits income averaging. By filling out a little over half of Schedule G, where you compare your 1983 income with the previous four years, you can find out if you are eligible for income averaging. If you are eligible, complete the form.

Youngsters invited to apply to College Gate for summer program

College Gate, a three week program for bright youngsters in kindergarten through grade three, is now accepting applications for its campus at the Lynch School in Winchester, July 9 — July 27, 1984. The half day program is totally academic in nature, featuring over twenty courses in the arts, mathematics, science, and the humanities. The subjects offered are those not traditionally found in regular schools; all are designed to unite hands and brains.

Last summer 650 youngsters attended College Gate hosted by the Natick, Winchester, Easton, and Hingham schools. This year another campus will be added to Medway. The program is now in its third season in Winchester whose School Committee has again agreed to host this unique program for bright and academically talented youngsters. Many journals in gifted education and local newspapers have featured articles about College Gate and its success with bright youngsters. For information call (617) 828-9283 or write Box 382, Stoughton, Ma. 02072.

Quannapowitt Players plan for 'Rebecca'

The Quannapowitt Players have announced the cast and crew assignments for their upcoming production, "Rebecca," by Daphne DuMaurier.

Set in Cornwall, England in the Victorian era, this drama revolves around the mysterious circumstances surrounding the fate of Rebecca de Winter.

The large cast hail from a number of different communities. David Huygens of Stoneham, who first graced the Q.P. boards with his gripping portrayal of Roland Maule, an eccentric playwright in "Present Laughter" is Maxim de Winter, our evasive widower, now remarried. Susan Sanders of Haverhill is Maxim's new wife, anxious to please and seemingly fragile. Susan recently performed as Mrs. Erickson, the unorthodox housekeeper in "PL." Assuming the role of the vengeful housekeeper of the changing Manderley estate, Mrs. Danvers, is Diane Lind of Melrose. Audiences will remember Diane as yet another veteran of "PL." having played Monica, the well-seasoned secretary.

Mark A. Szytko of Danvers and Pamela M. Denning of North

Reading depict Maxim's affable brother-in-law and outspoken sister, Major and Mrs. Giles Lacy. Mark portrayed Georges, the cockney bellboy in last season's "Hotel Paradiso." Pamela was the starstruck young actress, Daphne, in "PL" and performed as Mrs. Lovett in the Green Mountain Guild, Vt. production of "Sweeney Todd."

Household help always in evidence include Jim Watts of Reading who plays Frank Crawley and Bill Moors of Wakefield who portrays Frith. Jim's credits include playing the whacky Officer David Somerset in "The Soapy Murder Case" two seasons ago. Bill is a newcomer to the Q.P. stage itself but not behind it, being a loyal member of our Props department and set crews.

John Wood of Malden is Jack Favell, conniving cousin to a key character who resurfaces and attempts to use a past relationship and its trappings to his own gain. John has extensive Q.P. credits. Most recently, he had Q.P. audiences rolling with laughter with his hilarious performance as Boniface, the henpecked hero in "Hotel Paradiso."

Instrumental in unravelling our mystery are the Chief Constable, Colonel Julian, played by Barney Hoop of Wakefield and the boatmaker, William Tabb, portrayed by Sean Duffy of Lowell. Barney has many Q.P. credits including Amos, the snide jail guard in "The Runner Stumbles" last season. Sean is a relative newcomer to the Q.P. stage having depicted the staunch police inspector in "HP."

Rounding out the cast are two more household assistants — a servant and a maid, portrayed by Richard Taylor of Burlington and Barbara A. Davis of Everett respectively.

Directed by Deborah M. Parks of Wakefield, "Rebecca" boasts the following production crew: Program — Stephanie Moore of Wakefield; Stage Manager — Eric Thompson of Reading; Prompter — Barbara A. Davis of Everett; Set Design — Deborah M. Parks; Set Construction — David Low of Stoneham; Light Design and Operation — Jeanne Gorfine of Malden and Marianne Costumes — Pamela M. Denning of North Reading and Jerry DeCarlo of Wakefield; and Makeup — Judy Mahoney of Reading.

Production dates for "Rebecca" are February 17, 18, 24, 25, 26 and March 1, 2 and 4. A free performance for senior citizens is scheduled for Thursday, February 16 at 8:15 p.m. For ticket information and reservations, call the Q.P. Playhouse, 55 Hopkins Street, Reading at 944-4949.

ANTHONY MANCONI

Woodchips

Guy Festa, of Lynnfield works in the "right of way" division of the State Public Works Dept. The planning and feasibility studies before any highway or bridge is constructed is a very important and necessary requirement to ensure that roads don't have more twists and turns than a Corkscrew.

My two Italian cousins (civil engineers) came to America to study, learn and inspect our system of building tunnels. The supervisor of a major construction company saw them shaking their heads as they watched the progress of a project, asked them, "why do you disapprove, how do you build tunnels in Italy?" Angelo spoke up saying, "we have work crews start from both ends." "What if you don't meet in the middle?" "No problem," responded Pepe, "then we have 'Two' tunnels."

Guy told me to be sure and mention that Peter Pesa, is doing a fine job as Lynnfield's Chairman of the Board of Assessors. A-I Fish Store in Wilmington sells my favorite kind of fish, in Italian it's called "Calamary" in English it's "Squid." Some people wouldn't eat any if you gave them a million dollars and that's O.K. because if everybody liked Squid there wouldn't be enough for those of us who love it.

My mother who was Irish cooked and prepared it like they do in Sicily, try it folks you will be "Hooked" forever. Congratulations to James L. DeSimone for receiving a Bachelor of Science Degree from the Mass. College of Pharmacy. He is the son of James (Giggi) and Alice DeSimone, my friends of many years. James graduated Magna cum Laude and was the class Valedictorian at the winter commencement December 1.

I was never any good in the sciences. When my biology professor took a beaker of water and dropped a worm in it the worm swam round and round, even smiling at the class. He then took the worm out and put it in a beaker of alcohol and the worm plunged to the bottom "Dead." "What does this prove to you," he asked? "I was the only one dumb enough to answer, "If you don't want to get worms - Drink - alcohol."

Tom Jordan, of Reading, saw me yesterday and asked, "are you going on a trip, Woodchipper, I see the bags under your eyes?" O.K. Tom I owe you one. Michele Nottebart, of Stoneham, is pretty as a picture and that's the way almost all the young ladies are in "Nova Scotia," no artificial cosmetics, smiles or personalities.

"I think I cured you of Kleptomaniac," said my army doctor, "but if you should have a relapse try to pick me up a Pop-up Toaster." Sometimes my wife wears a "Mini-skirt," working as a teller in a Woburn bank. When she does she certainly "Draws a lot of interest." I took a figure skating course at the Stoneham Arena. The only way I can do the "Figure Eight" is "Two Fours."

My wife, however took a course at Women's World in Burlington. She looks wonderful and feels fit as a fiddle. The only drawback is she has a shape of a "Cello." The delivery men at Kris Oil are real friendly and "Tankful" gentlemen.

Margielynn Stratton is a Horticulturist, with the Mass. Dept. of Agriculture. She helped me numerous times with my garden problems this past summer, and I want to thank Jackie Young who did the same. I depend on these young ladies for their expert advice.

I'm all done sending away for foolish gadgets for my garden - I sent five dollars for what the ad said was a sure, "Bug Killer." I received a package with two blocks of wood - one marked A and the other B. The instructions were, "Place bug on block A and hit smartly with block B. Now how could anyone dumb enough to fall for that gimmick do anything "Smartly?"

My wife and I enjoyed a wonderful dinner at The Galley in North Reading. We love seafood, so reading about them in this paper and hearing from friends that they serve excellent food, we went there last weekend. I asked the Maitre 'D, "Do you serve crabs here, sir?" He looked at me, then at my wife and said "certainly sir, sit right down, tonight I'll make an exception."

The Woodchipper's advice to all young men in the area, "If you're only a little 'pebble' in your girl friend's life - try being a little "Boulder." My uncle John Shea, is 82 years old. He worked as a longshoreman on the docks in Charlestown ad Castle Island, he was Irish in every sense of the word. When John "Red" Moran became union president my uncle John became the hiring foreman. No one had a chance for a job if he wasn't Irish. Young Bert Townsend wanted to get hired and was asked, "are you Irish." "No," said Bert, but my grandmother is." "Good," said uncle John, "tell her to report to pier 4 at five in the morning."

A cousin of mine went to his "Eternal Rest," he got a government job in Washington, D.C. I don't understand this - but can anyone tell me why women who are naturally more sentimental, warmhearted and emotional than men are not generally known to be songwriters? Men as far as I know have written most of the songs, ballads and operas.

Some of the greatest poems have been written by women like, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Elizabeth Browning and Emily Dickinson to name three of many whose poems I love. A philosopher is generally a person who gives advice about troubles he or she never had. An Italian Blessing, "May your life be like good wine - tasty, sharp and clear. And like good wine - may it improve with every passing year." I'd rather be the second husband of a widow than her "First."

In less than fifty years, movies have gone from "Silent," to the present day norm of "Un-speakable." Japan is just getting around to honor a Kamakazi pilot who flew 47 combat missions. My sister Mary graduated from The New England Conservatory of Music in Pianoforte. She is teaching her granddaughter Diane and boasts that she plays the piano just like the famous Paderewski - "With both hands." Folks my thought for the week, "If things go wrong and you cry - then you have already lost. But if things go wrong and you try - then you have already won."

WINTERTIME AT THE USS CONSTITUTION makes for a picturesque scene as evident above with the famed historical vessel in its anchorage just off City Square in Charlestown. Despite the snow the historical site is frequented over the winter months by hundreds of visitors a week to relive a segment of American history.

Free skill training opportunities offered at Employment Connections in Chelsea Exciting skills training opportunities are available right now at Employment Connections, Inc., 980 Broadway, Chelsea. Classes are currently enrolling in Automotive Mechanics, Data Entry, and Machine Tool Operation. There are no training tuitions and in most programs, students receive a small stipend.

If automobiles, and how they work, fascinate you, you will want to learn more about Employment Connection's Automotive Technician Program. Today's cars are highly complex, technological machines and the need for qualified repair and maintenance technicians is growing. Even if you have never opened the hood of a car before, ECI training can prepare you for a career in the automotive industry in less than half a year. In 24 weeks of training you will learn automotive theory, diagnostic testing, repair and maintenance techniques, electrical systems, brakes, exhaust systems, tune-ups and more. In addition, ECI staff will help you prepare a professional resume, learn the ins and out of job interviewing, and provide job placement assistance.

If you are interested in working on computer terminals, Employment Connection's Data Entry Program may be for you. This special program for AFDC recipients consists of sixteen weeks of training. First, ECI staff will help you develop keyboarding techniques, terminal interaction and stroke speed. At the same time you will be learning valuable job skills, preparing your resume and learning how to interview. The second part of your training - learning computer disc encoding - will take place at an actual computer company where you will learn the disc encoding standards from the industry itself. Of course, job placement assistance is available to all program participants.

Machinists are highly skilled craftspeople in a field that has shown strong growth over a long period of time and will continue to grow in the foreseeable future. Good machinists are in constant demand. At Employment Connection's Machinist Trainee Program you will learn the skills necessary to enter the machinist trade. This 23 week training program includes blueprint reading, lathe operation, vertical and horizontal milling, precision measurement, grinding as well as many other skills. While you are learning, you will be making a number of the tools you will be constantly using when you enter the machinist profession. As always, placement assistance is part of your training at ECI.

If these three programs are not what you are looking for, Employment Connections has other training opportunities that may interest you. Electronics, Secretarial Skills - including Word Processing, Basic Education and English as a Second Language are just a few of the programs for which you may be eligible.

If you live in Arlington, Belmont, Burlington, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Malden, Medford, Melrose, North Reading, Reading, Revere, Somerville, Stoneham, Wakefield, Watertown, Wilmington, Winchester, Winthrop, or Woburn, come to: Employment Connections, Inc., 980 Broadway, Chelsea, Ma. 02150 or Employment Resources, Inc., 50-54 Essex Street, Cambridge, Ma. 02139 or Employment Resources, Inc., 24 Hancock Avenue, Medford, Ma. or call 884-1755.

But come in soon. Start your new year off right. Make 1984 the year you change your life for the better.

Degree-days helpful in estimating fuel consumption in the home

The total degree-days for a month in this city can be compared to the "normal" month, the latter being based on records kept for many years. If your heating bill goes down with a decline in degree-days for this year, that is to be expected. If your heating bill does not parallel the degree-day pattern, there is something wrong, and your heating system may need a check-up.

Degree-days indicate how much more or how much less fuel your house will use, in comparison with a normal winter for this area.

But just what is a degree-day? It is a practical measure of how intense the cold is outside on any given day. The Weather Bureau measures this by taking the average between the high temperature for the day and the low temperature, and then subtracting it from 65 degrees.

Thus if the high was 50 degrees and the low was 30 degrees, the average would be 40 degrees. Subtract that from 65 degrees and the result is 25 degrees for that day, or 25 degree-days, explains the Better Heating-Cooling Council.

Even though you keep the indoor temperature at 70 degrees or 72 degrees, the house has a shielding effect, so it generally does not require heat until the outdoor temperature drops below 65 degrees. This has been established in tests of houses with normal insulation; if there is very heavy insulation it will probably take longer before heat is needed.

Lopi has changed the face of the industry. We were the first to recognize that beauty and efficiency are NOT INCOMPATIBLE. And to prove it, we introduced grace and romance into all of our alternative energy appliances. By designing large glass doors for better fire viewing, delicately arched cast doors to create smooth curved lines, and featuring such distinctive marks of quality as etched glass panes and gleaming brass or nickel plating.

But Lopi did not sacrifice efficiency for beauty. Through the development of the industry firsts as the "Selected Manufacturer of the year 1982 at the International Solid Fuel Trade Show."

Fisher Extension goes Digital

The Wakefield Extension of Fisher Junior College has procured eight Digital computers and two printers for classroom use. A cooperative agreement has been reached with Principal Mary Angela to allow students of Our Lady of Nazareth Academy to utilize the Fisher DECmate IIs during the day. This equipment will be utilized to teach word processing as well as many other computer courses such as BASIC and COBOL. To help fulfill Fisher Junior College's mission of quality education and computer literacy for its students, and with the assistance of a grant from the Corporate Contributions Program of Digital Equipment Corporation, Fisher has purchased 200 Digital DECmate IIs and 52 printers for use in its continuing education facilities throughout Mass. This purchase is worth over $1,000,000. Fisher Junior College has 40 locations in Mass. offering an associates degree in business management and certificates in secretarial science and computer science. The addition of these 200 new DECmate IIs will enable Fisher to offer a new four-month certificate in word processing program. The computers were available for classroom use Jan. 23, 1984. For further information on Fisher's programs and to see its new Digital computers, contact Wakefield admissions counselor Elaine Peters at 245-0061.
